ENVIRONMENTAL LAW: WHAT'S NEW

Message from the Chair, Environmental Law Subcommittee

There is no doubt that 2020 will be long remember as the year of COVID-19 and perhaps as a precursor to the significant challenges that are coming from climate change induced disasters, potential ecological collapse in oceans and in terrestrial ecosystems.

Many Governments have adopted COVID-19 response plans to restart economies impacted by the Coronavirus.

The Impact of the New Civil Code on Human Resource Management
Author: Lu Jingbo, River Delta Law Firm | CHINA

On May 28, 2020, the Third Session of the Thirteenth National People's Congress deliberated and adopted the Civil Code of the People's Republic of China (hereinafter referred to as the Civil Code). The content of the Civil Code will come into effect on January 1, 2021, and is vast, with a total of 1,260 articles divided into seven parts: general principles, property rights, contracts, personality rights, marriage and family, succession, and tort liability.

Child Support Agreements and the recent decision of <Martyn and Martyn>
Authors: Eleanor Lau & Monique Robb, Lander & Rogers | AUSTRALIA

By now, you've no doubt heard the massive economic and social consequences of the COVID-19 pandemic being described as giving rise to "unprecedented times" more often than you can count. This has now given rise to an increasing number of judicial decisions as to the impact of the pandemic on legal obligations, in an increasingly broad spectrum of areas of legal specialisation. Family law is not immune from this. READ MORE
