

Eugene Sohn is a solo practitioner based in Seoul, Korea. She provides advice and counsel to international traders, art administrators and manufacturers in the semiconductor industry across a broad range of legal issues. Prior to starting her own law office two years ago, she has worked for the government and a major life insurance company in Korea. She has worked for the Ministry of Justice as a deputy director in charge of policies on the liberalization of the legal market. After her service for the Ministry of Justice, she has continued her career as an in-house counsel and the corporate secretary at Orange Life Insurance (the previous entity of Shinhan Life Insurance). She has graduated from Yonsei Law School.